1. Paragraph writing (SB page 15)

Answer

One day, Mr Sauna met a man in a smart suit. The man asked if he would like to buy a computer laptop, very cheap! The man showed him the computer, a very expensive laptop in a smart bag.

Mr Sauna agreed to pay five thousand Naira. He paid him the money, and took the bag home. When he got home, he found the bag was full of old yams. The trickster had switched the bag while he was counting the money.

2. The writing process (SB page 15)

Possible answer (there may be others)

One day, Mr Sauna met a man in a smart suit.

“Would you like to buy a computer laptop – it’s very cheap!” asked the man. The man showed him the computer, a very expensive laptop in a smart bag.

“How much do you want for it?” asked Mr Sauna.

“Only five thousand Naira! It’s a bargain!” replied the man.

“That’s a good price. Let me count the money for you,” answered Mr Sauna. “Here is the money.”

When he got home, he found the bag was full of old yams. The trickster had switched the bag while he was counting the money.

1. The fishing industry (SB page 27)

Answers

Countries with long (1) coastlines and good harbours are usually those that have the best-developed fishing (2) industries, and fishing makes an important contribution to the Nigerian (3) economy.

There is a great deal of (4) small-scale fishing along Nigeria’s coast, using traditional methods such as (5) fish traps, spear-fishing and handheld fishing (6) nets.

However, deep-water fishing requires quite
(7) sophisticated fishing boats.
The commonest type of fishing boat is called a (8) trawler. These boats drag long nets along the sea bed to collect the fishes in their path. The net is like a huge, somewhat flattened, cone-shaped bag attached to the boat by steel towing (9) cables. They are towed along for two to three hours before being hauled in by a special machine called a winch. Many modern trawlers have a large (10) refrigerator so that the (11) catch can be deep frozen.

Another common method of catching fish is called ‘lining’. Several kilometres of lines with baited (12) hooks are laid on the sea bed. Their position is marked by (13) buoys floating on the water. The lines are lifted each day. The fishes are removed from the hooks, and new (14) bait is put on.

Lining should not be confused with ‘drifting’. In drifting, a string of many fine nets is put out with floats attached, so that the nets hang like curtains in the water. Shoals of fish swim into the nets and are caught in the (15)mesh.

One of the main jobs of the Nigerian Navy is to protect Nigeria’s territorial waters from the fishermen catching fish out of (16) season. Sometimes fishing boats may have fishing nets which are too long, so that they catch too many fish. This can badly affect fish (17) stocks for future generations. Sometimes, fishermen use nets with too small a mesh, so that they catch fish that are not fully grown.

2. Capital letters (SB page 28)

Answers

In the old days of militant Christianity, witches were burned at the stake – in England and many other countries which are now regarded as civilised. In France, Joan of Arc, who was later honoured as a saint, was falsely accused of witchcraft and burned at the stake in 1431.

Not so long ago, in certain parts of Nigeria, people suspected of witchcraft had to undergo a special test. Recently, in South Africa, there has been a serious outbreak of so-called ‘witch-burning’.

1. He realised that they were desperate to get to the wedding so took advantage of their situation by taking every cent they had.
2. They had no money. Yes, the wedding should have proceeded as they young men had not planned to come empty-handed. The circumstances were out of their control.
3. They were thankful that the wedding would go on/they wish the bride happiness.
4. Own opinion – relieved that the bridegroom had finally arrived/that the wedding would take place.
5. The bridegroom’s party had arrived late, and they were dirty and had no money to pay for breakages in the bride’s mother’s house. The women wanted to stop the ceremony but were overruled by Peter Mcboca.
6. Own opinion with substantiation from the text.

3. Summary (SB page 95-6)

Answer

The men from Murang’a faced a number of problems on the wedding day: firstly, their cars had got stuck in the mud on the way there, and so they had arrived covered in mud. Secondly, they had had to pay a tractor driver to pull the cars out of the mud and so they had no money with them. They had had to leave some of the cars in the mud. Their appearance had created a bad impression on the women from the bride’s village who threatened to stop the ceremony.

C  Vocabulary development

2. Exercise (SB page 102)

Answers

In a church, an act of worship is known as a (1) service. The people in church are known as a (2) congregation. The seats where they sit in church are called ‘pews’. Some members of the congregation, who are not ordained, may be lay readers or lay (3) preachers. The Holy Bible is highly (4) revered by Christians as the word of God. (Much of the Bible is also in the Holy Qu’ran: in fact, Muslims, Christians and Jews as ‘people of the book’).

A minister is a Christian leader, called a (5) priest in some branches of the church. There is a hierarchy of priests/ministers, usually known collectively as the (6) clergy. There are two broad traditions within Christianity. These are known as Catholicism and Protestantism: there is a number of (7) doctrinal differences between the two, but they both profess (8) faith in Jesus as the Son of God.

Roman Catholics recognise the (9) Pope as their head. He (he is always male) is regarded as the highest priest in the Catholic Church. The head of the Anglican Church, one of the main branches of Protestantism, is called an (10) Archbishop. The other ranks of the clergy are bishops, archdeacons, deacons etc. Some branches of the church, particularly the Roman Catholic Church, also have (11) monks (male) and nuns (female), who belong to religious (12) orders.

2. Advertising (SB page 113)

Answers

A notice on the noticeboard in your school is a form of advertising. It might advertise an event such as a football match, or a play, or a concert. Its aim is to attract people to the event, and to inform them about important events.

In the world beyond school, advertising has become big business. The success or failure of a new product on the market may depend on how it is advertised. For a local shop in a small town, a handbill can be produced and distributed in the street. Even this basic form of advertising needs to be well produced if it is to give out the right message.

If large sums of money are involved, companies will often go to an advertising agency. This kind of organisation specialises in the best methods of advertising, and can play a key part in the promotion of a product. They may make advertisements for TV or radio, and design pictures to go on advertising hoardings.

Sometimes an organization may wish to improve its public perception – the way members of the public perceive it. For example, NEPA may wish to make people feel more appreciative of its efforts to serve the public despite the many problems it faces. To do this, a company might sign a contract with a public relations agency which will advise them on their public image.

2. The register of finance (SB page 141)

   Answers
   Money is a subject of great interest to most people and most people want to get more of it. The lawless ones among us see robbery, (1) embezzlement (C), and other forms of stealing as their way to it. Others enrich themselves by using the posts they occupy in companies or government departments to collect bribes or (2) kickbacks (B) for the award of contracts. Those without any financial (3) acumen (A) whatever will merely save any money they acquire by keeping it in the proverbial box under the bed or hole in the ground, in which case, clearly, it earns no (4) interest (A). But most people with (5) funds (E) to spare will think of some kind of (6) investment (B), acting on the sound principle that one sum of money can be made to grow into a larger sum.

   This can happen in various ways. In Nigeria small businesses are very popular; savings become the (7) capital (D) needed to establish a provisions shop, say, or to run a taxi. Although this type of business entails some (8) risk (A) it also offers the prospect of fairly quick and sometimes quite healthy (9) profits (E). Less enterprising citizens will prefer to put their money in savings or (10) deposit (C) accounts in banks, or they purchase interest-bearing Government (11) bonds (C) or (12) shares (B) in companies that pay a regular (13) dividend (E).

   Trading in stocks and shares is what large-scale financial dealings are all about, and in Nigeria, as in other countries, these are entirely carried out through the Stock Exchange. The Nigerian Stock Exchange has trading floors in Lagos, Port Harcourt and Kano. It also has branches in Kaduna, Onitsha and Ibadan. The middlemen of The Stock Exchange are known as (14) stockbrokers (A). They buy and sell shares on behalf of clients, for which they charge a (15) commission (D). Often, the client is a company seeking to purchase shares in another company, sometimes with a view to take it over completely. The reason is that several companies operate in a particular line of business, e.g. timber production or textiles, and each has a natural interest in driving out competitors and establishing a (16) monopoly (D). However, some of those dealing (17) on (B) the Stock Exchange are not there to further the interests of a company engaged in productive business. They are there merely to (18) speculate (C), i.e. to purchase shares when they are relatively cheap and sell them again when they fetch a higher price.

   At any one time certain shares are increasing in attractiveness and price, while others are less attractive and their price is falling.

   Occasionally, there is a general loss of (19) confidence (A) in the Stock Exchange, people rush to sell all their shares and there may even be a worldwide Stock Market (20) crash (E). A major event of this type happened in 2009.

2. Writing a summary (SB page 153)

Answers

The case of James is in marked contrast with that of Ibrahim Garba. He decided to return to his father’s farm and ignored his father’s criticism. A combination of his father’s practical experience and the knowledge he had gained from his studies resulted in increased production on the farm. As a result, he had saved money from the sale of some of the crops and he planned to buy a pickup van in the near future.

2. The register of theatre (SB page 159)

Answers

Last Saturday, we all went to the (1) theatre in a group. At the (2) box office, our teacher collected our (3) tickets. We then trooped through the entrance and down the (4) aisle and took our (5) seats in the front (6) row.

We sat down and, while we waited, read the (7) programme which gave details of the performance, including the (8) cast-list. The play was by the renowned Nigerian (9) playwright Wole Soyinka. The play, which was called The Trials of Brother Jero, was a (10) comedy about a fraudster named Jero who pretended to be very holy and religious. The play is a satire about tricksters who pretend to be religious leaders.

Soon, the (11) curtain rose on the play: the (12) scenery was simple, but effective: the play was set near the sea, and the (13) backcloth depicted a beach scene – sky, sea and sand, with a palm tree or two at each side. On the (14) stage there was a make-shift building, representing the hut where Jero conducted his beach-side services. The (15) costumes worn by the cast were modern dress; Jero himself was clad in white, but you could tell immediately that he was thoroughly untrustworthy, and the (16) audience settled down to enjoy the performance and eagerly awaited the (17) climax of the play when, they hoped, Jero would get his just desserts.

I am not going to give away details of the (18) plot, and how the play ends, because that might spoil your enjoyment.

The civil unrest that pervades our society today is (1) uncalled for. The civilised world cannot (2) understand the type of hatred that would have provoked people to murder their fellow citizens in hundreds, as has happened in many parts of the country. The fact that this is widespread makes it all the more (3) worrying. The argument has always been that people were manipulated into killing one another by those who (4) benefit from such killings. But what kind of people can be so easily manipulated to do things they would not (5) ordinarily have done of their own accord?

Education is very (6) important and people should have a reason for wanting to live. With mass poverty and unemployment existing alongside the (7) scandalous wealth of a small greedy minority, security is likely to be threatened in our country. Any government that sincerely wants to end religious and ethnic (8) conflicts must provide meaningful education and jobs for its own people. Education (9) cures ignorance. It is also the (10) duty of government to provide security for the governed.

Practice answers

Prior to 1994, life in Baruwa community on the outskirts of Lagos (1) was (A) simple and the estimated 300,000 residents (2) lived (C) in relative tranquillity. Their main concern was how to face the usual challenges of daily living.

However, all that (3) changed (B) as a special problem appeared. Some of the residents who (4) went (C) to draw water from a well noticed an oily substance in it. They dismissed it as a minor matter, but the substance began to (5) be noticed (C) in other wells.

After a while, those who sourced water from boreholes also began to (6) observe (C) changes in the taste and colour of the water they (7) obtained (B). In addition, an unusual odour started to waft around the environment.

Traditional religious believers in the community did not take the matter lightly. They resorted to a series of sacrifices to (8) appease (C) the gods of the land over the strange development. When that effort failed, a committee (9) was set up (B) to trace the source of the contaminant. This action (10) yielded (A) results, as a point of petroleum products leakage was detected at a nearby primary school.

Practice answers

The legal representative of the Baruwa community, Mr Bob Olukoya, said (Past Simple) the spillage in Baruwa has been (Present Perfect Simple) a problem to Lagos State since 1994. ‘Baruwa is sitting (Present Continuous) on a time-bomb waiting to explode,’ the lawyer said. (Past Simple) He added (Past Simple) that the services of experts and consultants have been employed (Present Perfect Simple), but ‘Up till now we have not been able (Present Perfect Simple) to detect the exact point of the leakages. I first got (Past Simple) involved in the issue early in 2000, but we are still fetching (Present Continuous) petroleum products from over 300 wells in Baruwa. It is (Present Simple) unfortunate that we cannot (Present Simple) find the source. Nigeria is losing (Present Continuous) money, the masses are not getting (Present Continuous) the benefit of their borehole, and they are living (Present Continuous) under the fear of explosion at any time because of the volatility of petroleum products.’ He went (Past Simple) on to say that ‘for the past twelve years the people of Baruwa have not been able (Present Perfect Simple) to get potable water. Currently, they travel (Present Simple) kilometres every day to get water, and the road to the community is (Present Simple) so bad that water tankers cannot (Present Simple) even get there.’
